Final Edition - 1993 Legislative Summary

INTRODUCTION

The 1993 session of the General Assembly considered a record 2,904 bills and resolutions, with more than 1,500 being passed by both houses and approved and signed by the Governor.

Approximately 150 of the items pertained directly or indirectly to higher education in Virginia. The measures included a number of requests for studies in which the Council of Higher Education will either participate or coordinate.

This was an important legislative session for higher education as the Delegates and Senators wrestled with how to accommodate an additional 65,000 students in the next few years with little or no additional funding and how to combat double-digit tuition increases that have made Virginia's colleges and universities some of the most expensive in the country.

As directed by the 1992 Appropriations Act, the Council presented the General Assembly with a restructuring report suggesting ways to begin handling the expected influx of students. The report also discussed such topics as ways to streamline administration, putting more emphasis on teaching, and finding more and better uses for technology, both in and out of the classroom.

The 1993 General Assembly approved a number of pieces of legislation related to academic issues, technology, budget issues, workforce and literacy issues, and others. In addition, the General Assembly considered bills related to licensure requirements and preservation of historic areas. The General Assembly also will continue its efforts to increase the number of health care workers by approving several measures related to health care that are relevant to higher education.

Halfway through the 1992-94 biennium, the Governor and the General Assembly amended the budget to reflect what they felt were funding priorities for higher education in the Commonwealth. Included in the amendments were faculty salary increases, additional student financial aid appropriations, additional funds for the community colleges to handle enrollment growth, and the authority for institutions to raise tuition and fees to pay for initiatives related to the report from the Commission on the University of the 21st Century.

What follows is a summary of the 1993 General Assembly Session. The first section offers a summary of House and Senate Bills that were approved and pertain to higher education.

The second section lists and describes a number of House and Senate study resolutions that the Council is involved in or has an interest in following. Finally, this report contains a section that presents a summary of the budgetary issues and funding levels as a result of the 1993 session.

Higher Education Appropriations from the 1993 General Assembly Session

The General Assembly adopted amendments to the 1992-94 state budget that provide higher salaries for state classified employees, college faculty, and public school teachers. In addition, the General Assembly and the Governor endorsed the following major increases for higher education included in the Governor's original 1993 amendments:

Additional student aid appropriations of $3.7 million (general fund) to help institutions meet 45 percent of student financial need.

An additional $3.4 million (general fund) for the Virginia Community College System to meet anticipated enrollment demands in 1994-95.

Additional tuition and fee authority for 21st century initiatives and for institutions to address safety and security issues and environmental and federal mandates.

What follows is a summary of the major General Assembly actions regarding higher education.

Salary Increases

College an university faculty will receive an average 3.55 percent salary increase, effective December 1, 1993. This increase — the largest since 1989-90 — will track estimated 1993-94 national salary increases. The General Assembly also added $200,000 to the Eminent Scholars Program, which will allow institutions, in total, to meet about 68 percent of the 1993-94 eligible endowment earnings.

State classified employees will receive a 2 percent across-the-board increase on December 1, 1993. In addition, the General Assembly provided funds for performance increases ranging from 2.25 percent to 6.9 percent. Including the 2 percent across-the-board increase, the statewide average salary increase for classified employees will be about 6.8 percent.

New Instructional Equipment

Colleges and universities will be able to purchase an additional $20 million in instructional and research equipment thanks to a new lease-purchase program similar to the existing Equipment Trust Fund program. The dept-service cost of the program in 1993-94 will be paid from a general fund appropriation of $600,000. The $20 million allocation will be used to purchase equipment in computer science, replace obsolete equipment, and buy equipment for several instructional technology initiatives.

New Entities and Sites

The General Assembly added language and additional state funds to plan and expand new higher education sites, including the College of Integrated Science and Technology at James Madison University and the College of Global Studies at Radford University. Also, the General Assembly included funds for the Virginia Community College System and the City of Norfolk to plan a Norfolk campus of Tidewater Community College. Other amendments provide funds for the VCCS to lease instructional space in Midlothian and Newport News, for support of the Southwest Virginia Higher Education Center, and for Clinch Valley College to expand into Abingdon.

Instructional Technology and Curricular Change

The General Assembly provided state funds to support change in the ways instruction is provided to students. Included are funds and positions for a nursing program at Clinch Valley College and the expansion of Old Dominion University's televised engineering technology program to community college locations across Southside Virginia. Virginia Tech will receive funds and positions to develop alternative instructional techniques in undergraduate writing courses. The community colleges will receive funds to plan for an allied health distance learning program. The General Assembly provided planning funds at Old Dominion University for a statewide televised instruction network and for faculty and administrative costs associated with designing an entirely new curriculum at George Mason University. Norfolk State will receive funds to continue to plan for doctoral programs, and a related language amendment signifies the General Assembly's intent that Norfolk State University offer doctoral degrees, as agreed by the Council of Higher Education. Both Norfolk State University and Virginia State University will receive additional money for academic enhancements.

Library Technology and Administrative Computing

The Virginia Community College System will receive additional funds to link its libraries to one another and to the libraries of four-year colleges in the state. Christopher Newport University and Longwood College will receive money for a computer network and a mainframe computer, respectively, and the College of William and Mary will receive funds for computing technical support. Also, the General Assembly added money to replace the automated library system at Radford University.

Health Education

Other General Assembly additions to the budget emphasize family practice and other primary health care services. Additional support is provided for the Virginia Center for the Advancement of Generalist Medicine at the University of Virginia. A language amendment asks the Council of Higher Education to report on ways to increase the number of primary care physicians and residents by the two university hospitals and the Medical College of Hampton Roads. The three medical schools receive a total of $300,000 to support family practice residencies.

Other Funding Increase

In addition to the above amendments, the General Assembly included general fund support for nonresident cadets in the Unique Military Activities Program at Virginia Military Institute. The General Assembly provided $3.4 million to restore most of the budget reductions for Cooperative Extension programs at Virginia Tech. The General Assembly also appropriated $900,000 to provide one-quarter of the difference in resident and nonresident tuition levels for spouses and dependents of nonresident military personnel stationed in Virginia for 1993-94. This compares to one-half of the difference, which is provided for 1992-93.

Budget Reductions

The General Assembly's amendments to the 1992-94 budget reduce general fund support for indigent care at the Medical College of Virginia and the University of Virginia Hospital by $5.5 million. Part of the reduction is related to changes in Medicaid funding, and part is a result of prohibiting the use of state indigent care funding for non-Virginians.

Language Amendments

A number of language amendments on policy and special studies are included in the General Assembly's amendments. One amendment directs the Council of Higher Education and the colleges and universities to continue discussions concerning curricular change and staffing productivity and to submit recommendations to the Governor and the General Assembly. Language gives additional guidance for the Council's Funds for Excellence program and requests biennial reports on the program. Other language amendments authorize the Virginia Community College System to plan for a Tidewater Community College campus in Norfolk, and for the University of Virginia to identify staffing and resource needs at Clinch Valley College.

The General Assembly also agreed to language amendments offered by the Governor. These include Council of Higher Education studies of graduate education and instructional equipment needs in higher education.

The specific language amendments are offered in the studies section of this document.

Capital Outlay

As a result of General Assembly amendments, the University of Virginia and Virginia Tech are authorized to pursue new, alternative financing mechanisms for educational and general facilities. At the University of Virginia, the Darden School Foundation will design and construct an academic facility for use by the Darden Graduate School of Business Administration and will support expansion of the school's executive conference center. The university will issue up to $40 million in revenue bonds for this project, and the foundation will make debt service payments for the life of the issue. Further, the university will lease the executive program facilities to the foundation at a rate that will cover debt service expenses plus operating and maintenance costs.

At Virginia Tech, the Virginia Tech Foundation will design, construct, and finance a new educational and general office building. Virginia Tech will lease this new space for no more than 20 years, at which time the facility will become state-owned. The lease costs for the new facility will be paid through the elimination of existing lease payments when certain administrative functions are moved out of rented space to the new building.

In addition to the these projects, the General Assembly has authorized James Madison University and George Mason University to use nongeneral funds to continue planning for their new educational entities. James Madison will plan a housing facility at the new College of Integrated Science and Technology and George Mason will pay for design services for its new Arlington Metro Campus.

Other institutions received general fund appropriations for emergency capital projects, to plan for new academic or library space, or to acquire land. The General Assembly also authorized several institutions to use nongeneral funds to construct or renovate dormitories, bookstores, parking space, and research space, and to purchase land. Details of the capital outlay projects are included in Table 6.

Summary of the 1992 - 1994 Appropriations

For budgetary purposes, the operations of an institution of higher education are normally separated into four categories: Educational and General Programs, Financial Assistance for General Services, Student Financial Assistance, and Auxiliary Enterprises.

Educational and General Programs include the instructional, research, and public service programs of an institution as well as the necessary academic support, institutional support, student services, and physical plant maintenance and operation.

Financial Assistance to Educational and General Services include those aspects of the Educational and General programs which usually are funded from non-state sources, primarily the federal government and private foundations. Sponsored research is a major activity within this group.

Student Financial Assistance funds are appropriated for scholarships and fellowships.

Auxiliary Enterprises are operated by an institution to provide non-educational services to the students, faculty, staff, or the general public. Typical self-supporting enterprises are residence halls and food services.

The total appropriations for all higher education activities include funds appropriated to non-higher education agencies that are earmarked for higher education purposes. This broad definition includes, for instance, appropriations to the Department of Health and to the Department of Military Affairs for financial aid to students attending institutions of higher education. The funding amounts below reflect the total appropriations for the 1992-94 biennium.

1992-94 Appropriations for the Four Higher Education Categories

Education and General

$4,433,254,563 of which $1,684,182,398 (37.9%) is from the general fund. The total 1992-94 appropriation for Educational and General Programs is 13.9% greater than the final, adjusted 1990-92 appropriation. The general fund portion represents a decrease of 9.7%.

Financial Assistance for Educational and General Services

$789,720,777, of which $61,865,041 (7.8%) is from the general fund. The total 1992-94 appropriation for Financial Assistance for Educational and General Services is 9.8% greater than the 1990-92 appropriation. The general fund portion represents a decrease of 20.7%.

Student Financial Assistance

$155,754,420, of which $137,807,240 (88.5%) is from the general fund. The total 1992-94 appropriation for Student Financial Assistance is 43.2% greater than the 1990-92 appropriation. The general fund portion represents an increase of 39.2%.

Auxilliary Enterprises

$812,548,103, all from the higher education operating fund. The total 1992-94 appropriation for Auxiliary Enterprises is 13.1% greater than the 1990-92 appropriation.

In summary, total appropriations for the operating expenses of all institutions, affiliated agencies, and other activities related to higher education are $6,191,277,863 for the 1992-94 biennium. General fund support for higher education decreased 7.3% since the 1990-92 biennium. Higher education's total general fund appropriations decreased from $2,031,390,648 in the 1990-92 biennium to $1,883,854,679 in the current biennium. Higher education has become increasingly dependent on nongeneral fund sources, predominantly tuition and fees.

The total appropriation average per full-time-equivalent student will increase from $6,470 in 1992-93 to $6,780 in 1993-94. The general fund contribution will increase from $3,493 in the first year of the biennium to $3,515 the second year.

Table 1 shows higher education appropriations for 1992-93. Table 2 shows higher education appropriations for 1993-94. Table 3 shows higher education appropriations for the 1992-94 biennium. Table 4 shows the changes in general fund appropriations from 1986-88 through 1992-94. Table 5 reflects the total Educational and General appropriations per full-time-equivalent student for each year of the biennium at each of the state-supported institutions of higher education. Footnotes for Table 4

(1) All appropriations exclude Central Appropriations in the year in which they are appropriated. Appropriations for 1986-88 exclude a portion of fringe benefit appropriations for classified and faculty positions associated with an increase in Social Security costs. This sum is included in a Central Appropriation. Appropriations for 1988-90 reflect a 2 percent general fund reversion in 1989-90. Appropriation for 1990-92 reflect all general fund reductions, including those found in Chapter 834 of the 1992 General Assembly. To make them consistent with prior years, appropriations for 1992-94 include relevant Central Appropriations.
(2) Beginning in 1990-92, this program ($200,000) was transferred from SCHEV to the Department of Education.
(3) The 1986-88 appropriation included $420,000 to be allocated to a total of seven institutions of higher education for the Virginia Writing Project, and $100,000 to be paid to the Virginia Association of Museums. For 1988-90, the amounts were $420,000 for the Virginia Writing Project and $150,000 for the Virginia Association of Museums. For 1990-92, the amounts were $149,625 for the Writing Project and $53,437 for the museum association. In 1992-94, the activities of the Center were transferred to the University of Virginia.
(4) 1986-88 appropriation included $25,000,000 within the VCBA to establish, administer, and implement the Higher Education Equipment Trust Fund and $3,800,000 in Central Appropriations to cover lease payments. Subsequent amounts are appropriated through Higher Education Academic, Fiscal and Facility Planning and Coordination, in Central Appropriations, and relates only to lease payments.
(5) Only the higher education related (student financial assistance) portion of the agency budget is reflected in this summary.
(6) This program was not included in previous summaries.
